Welcome letter

Dear colleagues and attendees,

The Hellenic Society of Medical Oncology (HeSMO), in collaboration with the American Society of Clinical Oncology (ASCO) is proud to welcome you to the International Palliative Care Workshop (IPCW), to be held on May 10th and 11th, 2019 in the beautiful and historical city of Athens. As members of the organizing and scientific committee, we are happy to host this very important educational event, initiated by ASCO, to enhance training skills in the fields of Palliative and Supportive care in Oncology globally.

It has been a constant goal of HeSMO to host such exceptional events in Greece and we were happy to achieve it efficiently and effectively originally in 2017, with the organization of the International Clinical Trials Workshop (ASCO ICTW).

The present Workshop will give a unique opportunity to all participants to understand the aims and scope of Palliative Care in cancer and to acquire essential knowledge and skills on important palliative care topics. World-experts in the field, will provide their experience and expertise with the aim to deliver a comprehensive educational workshop with high quality lectures and breakout sessions.

The IPCW is a two-day, comprehensive workshop dedicated to increase level of education in Palliative Care in Oncology. It is an ideal training environment for all professionals in this field of interest, including -but not restricted to- physicians, oncology nurses and psychologists, whilst trying to encompass all professionals who are actively involved in the field of Palliative Care.

In the current workshop, we tried to focus on all important aspects of palliative care, such as the value of early palliative cancer care, ethical challenges in palliative care, building a palliative care program, with a special focus on current reality regarding Palliative Care in Greece. We also planned to include four interactive “break out” sessions designed to address specific “cutting edge” issues within the field of interest, which allow a more active participation of attendees within smaller flexible groups that will be rotated accordingly.

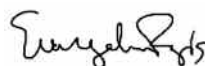

In this context, we would like to give once more a warm welcome to all of you, and especially to all foreign colleagues, for participating in this Workshop in Athens and to wish to all of you a prosperous and fruitful educational event.
